

If the lateral consists of more than one material, the portion under the structure and any extension of that same material outside the structure remains the responsibility of the property owner. The connection from the building lateral to the sewer main is the responsibility of the City. If the lateral is made of only one material, the property owner's responsibility extends five feet beyond any part of the structure, including porches, decks, and similar features.